

Gay New Year Throng Received at the White House Reception Today by President and Mrs. Taft; Cabinet Officers, Judiciary, Diplomats, Senators, Representatives, and Private Citizens Among Guests

NEW YEAR THROG GREETED BY TAFT

White House Scene of Gorgeous Annual Reception.

peals. Then the President shook hands with the Senators and Representatives who remained in Washington during the holidays. There were only a few of them.

Through some misadventure, the army and navy contingent who usually pass down the line just following the Congressional contingent, were admitted a little previously. As a result, the line for a time presented a somewhat conglomerate appearance, with the gay military and naval trappings of the gallant officers intermingled with the somber frock coats of some of our leading legislative lights.

Lesser Officials.
With the passing of the military, the spectacular features of the reception were at an end, and the lesser Government officials in plain citizen clothes, filed in, in the following order:

The Solicitor General, Assistant Attorney General, Assistant Secretary of the departments, Assistant Postmaster General, the Regents and Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, the Civil Service Commissioners, the Interstate Commerce Commissioners, the tariff board, the Railroad Securities Commissioners, the Indian Land Commissioners, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, the Treasurer of the United States, the Librarian of Congress, the Public Printer, the heads of bureaus in the several departments, the president of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb.

Then followed the various patriotic societies, who are accorded special recognition at the New Year reception. Members of the following organizations were in line: The Society of the Cincinnati, the Aztec Club of 1847, the Associated Veterans of the War of 1812, the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, the Grand Army of the Republic, the Medal of Honor Legion, the United Mexican Legion, the Union Veterans' Union, the Society of the Army of Santiago, the Spanish-War Veterans, the Army and Navy Club, the Minute Men, the Sons of the American Revolution, and the members of the Oldest Inhabitants Association of the District of Columbia.

Citizens in Line.
The last of the official visitors left by 1 o'clock. Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Sherman, and the ladies of the Cabinet, then withdrew from the reception line to the state dining room, where refreshments were served. In the blue room the President and his Cabinet squatted their shoulders and prepared to receive the long line that for hours had been gathering along the White House walls. The President's smile broadened, the bugles sounded, the band broke into a lively two-step and the "common people" entered the White House.

A heterogeneous throng—typically American—rushed to the lively music of the band, quickened to hurry them along. The line moved forward until it reached the President, but there it was delayed by each individual's personal greeting from the host.

A few feet down the line from the President stood several well-groomed and well-built men apparently lounging carelessly about, but keeping a careful eye on the moving line as it approached the Executive mansion. They were Secret Service men, and not a person reached the objective point of the line without their close scrutiny. There were no hands or packages carried in the line, and no one approached the President without keeping their two hands in plain sight.

The band quickened its tune, shifting from the lively two-step to more lively ragtime. The line moved forward more persistently in keeping the line moving, but still the common people came on. The line moved forward, heralded the ending of the winter day they fled through the Blue Room.

Little Tafts Extend Greeting on All Sides.
Robert Taft, the eldest son of the Chief Executive and a sturdy, wholesome looking youth, was here and there throughout the entire suite of state apartments, extending the season's greetings on all sides.

Charlie Taft, the boy of the household, attracted considerable attention in the corridor early in the reception, where he appeared with his model of an airship, with which it is said he contemplates flight from the roof of the White House, but up to the present date has been prevailed upon to postpone indefinitely the date of the ascent or descent, as the case may be.

A prominent figure who was the cynosure of all eyes as he entered and stood for a while chatting in the corridor, was Representative Champ Clark of Missouri. His appearance was the occasion for some conjecturing as to his rank at the New Year reception of 1911.

The representative of the Far East who attended the reception and were the center of attraction for a while in the Green Room, just after passing down the receiving line, lent quite a picturesque touch to the scene.

The Chinese minister and his suite, with the exception of Mr. Tung Kwal, the wife of the first secretary, and an American woman, and one or two of the attaches, who wore the conventional frock coat of morning costume, were in marked contrast to the appearance of the Japanese ambassador, who, with his entire retinue, wore up-to-date European clothes.

Mr. Chang wore the rich Oriental kimono of his native land and Mrs. Chang and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Henry K. Chang, wore the most exquisite kimono of pale blue embroidered silk and pantalettes of a darker shade. A unique feature of Mrs. Henry K. Chang's costume was distinctly Occidental diamond pendant, which she displayed proudly outside her quaint kimono.

Inclement Weather.
No hindrance to Plans.
Despite the inclemency of the weather outside, the White House never looked more attractive than it did this morning for the President's 1911 New Year reception.

The drawing rooms presented a most cheerful and imposing picture, and quite an innovation in the interior decorations was the bandstand here and there. Heretofore the floors have always been bare for the occasion. Tall vases filled with American Beauty roses stood about and the furniture placed about in inviting groups for the guests, was a particularly grateful innovation to those assisting, who have usually been obliged to stand aimlessly around for hours.

Still another arrangement departing a little from the customary routine was the dividing of the Marine Band into two groups, one on either side of the state kept clear through the north corridor, for the entrance of the guests. Mrs. Taft looked particularly well in a gown of goblin blue chiffon trimmed with touches of black, and veiled in a lighter shade of chiffon, the overdrape edged with black fur. She carried a cluster of white roses and gardenias.

Miss Helen Taft, who was the center of a gay group throughout the reception, wore her debut gown of white satin with an overdrape of pink embroidered chiffon.

Mrs. Sherman in Black.
With Plum Hat and Sables.

Mrs. Sherman, wife of the Vice President, was handsomely gowned in black velvet with the bodice embroidered in pink pearls and she wore a large black picture hat trimmed with plumes, and handsome sables.

Mrs. MacVeagh, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, wore ivory velvet embroidered with white plumes.

Mrs. Meyer, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, wore a distinguished figure, wore cerise satin veiled in black chiffon with touches of gold braid on the bodice.

Mrs. Ballinger, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, was in heavy corded white corded silk with the bodice trimmed with pearls and silver embroidery and touches of brown fur on the bodice and skirt.

Mrs. Nagel, wife of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, wore black velvet with a large black plumed hat.

One particularly interesting group of well-gowned women included the house guests of the Vice President and Mrs. Sherman. In the party were Mrs. Sherman, their daughter-in-law, who wore ruby velvet and chiffon with a large black picture hat trimmed with plumes, and a chinchilla stole and muff.

Mrs. Richard Sherman, another daughter-in-law, wore King's blue chiffon veiled with a black picture hat and black fox fur.

Miss Trewe, of Herkimer, N. Y., was in black velvet, with a black velvet hat trimmed with a large black plume.

Miss Florence Miller, of Utica, N. Y., wore a beautiful gown of gray chiffon over green satin, with a picture hat of gray satin, and Miss Gertrude Miller, daughter of the same shade.

Miss Hadfield, sister of the Attorney General, wore white satin veiled in black, and a chinchilla stole.

Attorney General's Daughter in Gold-Colored Chiffon.
Mrs. Albert Akin, daughter of the Attorney General and Mrs. Wickersham, wore gold-colored chiffon, with a large black hat and white fox fur.

Miss Alys Meyer, daughter of the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Meyer, who accompanied her parents, wore a handsome gown of white broadcloth and black velvet, with a black satin hat faced with pink and trimmed with marabou.

Miss Nagel, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, was an attractive figure in a gown of pale blue cloth, with a pale blue hat to match.

Mrs. James R. Mann, wife of Representative Mann of Illinois, was becomingly gowned in white satin veiled in black marquisette, with touches of coral velvet, and a hat of coral velvet.

Mrs. DeWitt Talmage, wore black velvet embroidered in white, with gold trimmings, and a black hat.

Mrs. Medora Crawford, wife of General Crawford, wore golden brown embroidered chiffon.

Mrs. Cuno H. Rudolph, wife of Commissioner Rudolph, wore a stunning sash of brown velvet, with a large brown velvet hat trimmed with a large black hat and white fox fur.

Mrs. Anderson, wife of Justice Anderson, wore a black and white picture hat trimmed with white plumes.

The women of the judiciary, always a dignified coterie, presented an especially interesting appearance this morning, on account of the three new faces in the circle—Mrs. Hughes, wife of the former governor of New York, Mrs. Van Devanter, and Mrs. Lamar, wives of the recently appointed magistrates.

Mrs. White, wife of Chief Justice White, whose husband has been only recently elevated to his post since the last New Year reception, was one of the handsomely gowned women present. She wore black and white striped satin veiled in black chiffon and trimmed in bands of turquoise embroidery, with a black and white hat and ermine fur.

Mrs. Harlan in Gown of Jet Broadcloth Silk.
Mrs. Harlan, wife of Associate Justice Harlan, was in a becoming gown of jet broadcloth silk. Miss Harlan wore electric blue marquisette over satin, and Miss Ruth Harlan was in pale green crepe de chine.

Mrs. Oliver Wendell Holmes, wife of Associate Justice Holmes, wore golden brown satin and chiffon.

Mrs. Lorton, wife of Associate Justice Lorton, wore black chiffon broadcloth, with a bodice of embroidered black and white chiffon trimmed with touches of silver and ermine fur.

Mrs. McKenna, wife of Associate Justice McKenna, was extremely handsome in a gown of royal purple velvet.

Mrs. Day, wife of Associate Justice Day, wore plum colored broadcloth trimmed with gold lace, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Rufus Day, who accompanied her, was in a beautiful gown of golden brown velvet, hand embroidered on the bodice and sleeves.

Mrs. Hughes, wife of Associate Justice Hughes, who made her first appearance today at a White House New Year reception as the wife of a member of the Supreme Court, wore a striking gown of changeable green and pink chiffon veiled, with a long silver bead tunic, with a long silver bead tunic, with a black velvet hat trimmed with white plumes.

Mrs. Van Devanter, wife of one of the new members of the judiciary, who appeared for the first time at a White House function, was handsomely gowned in black net over green satin with jet garnitures and a black hat.

Mrs. Lamar, wife of the new Associate Justice Lamar, wore a handsome tailored suit of black broadcloth with a black velvet hat.

Mrs. Brown, wife of former Justice Brown, wore a handsome gown of rich black satin with a large black hat.

Mrs. Van Orsdel, wife of Justice J. A. Van Orsdel, was becomingly attired in a black and white picture hat with a large black hat trimmed with plumes, and black furs.

Mme. Jusserand First to Greet Mr. and Mrs. Taft.

On account of the illness of Baroness Hengelmüller, wife of the Austro-Hungarian ambassador, the dean of the corps, Mme. Jusserand, wife of the French ambassador, was the first wife of an ambassador to greet the President and Mrs. Taft.

Mme. Jusserand wore a handsome gown of black velvet with a black hat and fur.

Mme. Loewenthal-Linai, wife of the new minister of the Argentine Republic, who came to Washington a few months ago a bride, greeted the President and Mrs. Taft at their first New Year reception at the White House.

Mme. Linai was beautifully gowned in black velvet trimmed with gold ermine, and a large picture hat trimmed with black fur and heron feathers.

Baroness Freuchen, wife of the naval attaché of the Austro-Hungarian embassy, always an attractively gowned figure, wore hand embroidered pink satin with a pink velvet hat trimmed with pink and black plumes.

Mme. Lefevre-Pontalis, wife of the new counselor of the French embassy, wore a becoming gown of golden brown liberty satin with a large brown velvet hat trimmed with black and white plumes.

Countess de Chambrun, wife of the military attaché of the French embassy, one of the most attractive members of the diplomatic corps, appeared in a handsome gown of black crepe de chine embroidered in bands of gold and silver with a black satin toque with white aigrettes.

Mme. de Peretti de la Rocca, wife of the first secretary of the French embassy, wore taupe velvet made with a tunic of ermine chiffon embroidered in black beads, while her hat was of black velvet with white aigrettes and a zibeline stole and muff.

German Ambassador's Wife and Daughter Attractive.
Countess von Bernstorff and Countess Luise-Alexandra von Bernstorff, wife and daughter of the German ambassador, were among the most attractive looking guests at the reception.

The Countess wore a gown of black velvet and chiffon trimmed in black fur bands, with a black picture hat trimmed in white plumes.

Countess von Bernstorff wore a dark blue cloth gown trimmed in velvet and white lace over cloth of gold. Her hat was of black velvet with black plumes.

Baroness Uchida, wife of the Japanese ambassador, wore a gown of black liberty satin with an overdrape of New marquisette, and a large black hat trimmed with a bird of paradise.

Mrs. Matsui, wife of the counselor of the Japanese embassy, wore an imported gown of peacock blue silk, with a hat to match, and black lynx fur.

Marchesa Cusani, wife of the Italian ambassador, with their attractive young daughter, Donna Beatrice Cusani, were the objects of considerable attention. This was their first appearance at the White House at a public function, as they only arrived in Washington a month or two ago, and, though they have been entertained informally at teas by Mrs. Taft, there has been no official function since their arrival.

Marchesa Cusani wore white lace over satin, and a large black hat trimmed with plumes. Her daughter wore a dainty gown of white chiffon cloth, with a large white hat trimmed with plumes.

Mme. Vassiliev, wife of the naval attache of the Russian embassy, wore a gown of wine-colored satin, trimmed in black velvet, and a black velvet hat with plumes.

Mrs. Young, wife of the first secretary of the British embassy, wore white lace veiled in black chiffon, with trimmings of black velvet ribbons, and a black picture hat with plumes.

Mrs. Kennard, wife of the second secretary of the British embassy, wore gray velvet, with a gray velvet hat trimmed in plumes.

Mme. Pfister, wife of the naval attaché of the Italian embassy, looked extremely well in a gown of French blue charmeuse satin embroidered in gold and black and a black picture hat trimmed with white plumes.

Mme. de Lima, the attractive young wife of the counselor of the Brazilian embassy, and one of the beauties of the corps, wore a handsome black velvet gown trimmed in lace with a large black velvet hat trimmed in purple plumes.

Mme. de Azevedo, wife of the naval attaché of the Brazilian embassy, wore a gown of French silk voile over gray silk, hand-embroidered on the bodice, and a gray velvet hat with black plumes.

Mme. Calvo, and the Misses Calvo, wife and daughters of the minister of Costa Rica, were also among the handsomely gowned women at the reception.

Mme. Calvo wore a handsome gown of black and white marquisette veiled in black chiffon embroidered on the bodice in a design of orchids. Her hat was of black velvet trimmed in mauve plumes.

Miss Calvo wore a gown of French blue marquisette over satin and a black picture hat trimmed in plumes.

Miss Maria Calvo was in a becoming frock of garnet colored velvet with a large white lace hat.

Wife of Bolivian Minister in Gray Chiffon Over Satin.

Mme. Calderon, wife of the minister of Bolivia, wore gray chiffon over satin, with a black picture hat trimmed in plumes.

Mme. Ali Kuli Khan, wife of the charge d'affaires of the Persian legation, wore brown velvet trimmed in Siberian point, and a black picture hat.

Mme. Villegas, wife of the charge d'affaires of the Argentine legation, wore an extremely becoming gown of yellow satin draped in chiffon and trimmed in bands of Venetian lace with a large black hat trimmed in plumes.

Miss Maria Helena Villegas, daughter of the minister, wore white embroidered chiffon over silk with a large white hat.

Mme. Pardo, wife of the minister of Peru, wore a beautiful gown of liberty blue satin veiled in black chiffon with a small black silk hat with plumes.

Mme. Ekengren, wife of the charge d'affaires of the Swedish legation, looked well in a gown of pale gray meteor crepe, hand embroidered and trimmed in Irish lace. She wore a large black hat with pink plumes.

Mme. London, wife of the minister of the Netherlands, wore gray crepe de chine with gray fox fur and a gray velvet hat.

Countess Moltke, wife of the Danish minister, was extremely handsome in a gown of black chiffon over white satin with a large hat of black velvet.

Countess de Bulassart, wife of the minister of Belgium, wore a handsome gown of apricot cloth trimmed in black velvet and a black velvet hat with white marabou. She wore black furs.

Mme. Riano, wife of the Spanish minister, wore a beautiful gown of French blue satin veiled in chiffon with a large velvet hat trimmed in fur and gray plumes.

Mme. Bryn, wife of the minister of Norway, wore mauve satin with a black hat trimmed in white plumes.

Three of Roosevelt Family Greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Taft.
Prominent even in the distinguished coterie assembled in the Blue Room to greet the President and Mrs. Taft and the members of the Cabinet and their wives, as the receiving party took their places in line, was a little group of three members of the family of the President's immediate predecessor in office. They were Mrs. Longworth, wife of Representative Longworth, the former Alice Roosevelt, and perhaps the most fitted belle of White House history, accompanied by her younger sister, Miss Ethel Roosevelt, who made her debut at the White House just two years ago, and Kermit Roosevelt. The little party arrived early and were greeted right and left by old friends, anxious to extend the felicitations of the season.

Mrs. Longworth, always a strikingly gowned woman, wore a modish costume of gray charmeuse satin, in one of the new shades of gray, with a yoke of Irish lace and a wide insertion of the lace in the front panel of the skirt of the knees, the lace edged with effective touches of burnt amber panne velvet.

Miss Roosevelt also wore a gray gown, a girlish costume of shirred gray chiffon with a girle of coral satin and effective touches of coral satin on the sleeves and the lace collar which formed the yoke. Both Mrs. Longworth's and Miss Roosevelt's gowns were made in the prevailing fashion of exceedingly narrow skirts.

Miss Mabel Boardman, one of Mrs. Taft's special friends, looked exceedingly handsome in an imported gown of peacock blue satin veiled in a tunic of beaded chiffon, edged with natural marabou and touches of silver embroidery and marabou on the bodice.

Mrs. A. G. McClinton wore a stunning costume of palest pink charmeuse satin, veiled in a shirred tunic of black chiffon, with trimmings of the satin and chiffon on the bodice.

Mrs. Huntington Wilson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, and one of the most beautiful of the younger married women in the Capital, wore a gown of black velvet with a large black picture hat trimmed with white plumes.

Mrs. Bryce, wife of the British ambassador, who arrived from Europe yesterday, coming directly to Washington especially to attend the reception this morning, wore a beautiful gown of black satin, with the bodice and front panel of the skirt of white chiffon, veiled in black chiffon, with black fur, and a black velvet hat trimmed with white plumes.

Mrs. Beekman Winthrop, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was attractively gowned in rich mauve satin embroidered in self-colored silk on the bodice, with touches of French lace on the sleeves and sleeves.

Mrs. Spencer Cosby, wife of the master of ceremonies, Colonel Cosby, U. S. A., and a particularly youthful matron, wore white satin trimmed with bands of soft blue satin, veiled in black chiffon. Her mother, Mrs. Charles R. Shepard, who accompanied her, was handsomely attired in black velvet with the yoke of net and the top of the bodice embroidered in chalk pearls.

Mrs. Horace Westcott, one of the group of Mrs. Taft's most intimate friends present, wore a French gown of mauve satin with polonaise embroidered on the sleeves and Dutch neck. Mrs. French lace.

Mrs. Charles D. Norton, wife of the Secretary to the President, who came down stairs in line with the Attorney General in the absence of Mrs. Wickersham, wore white striped satin trimmed with bands of fur.

Miss Harriet Anderson, one of the guests at the White House and a niece of Mrs. Taft, wore a pretty gown of French blue satin, veiled in golden brown chiffon, trimmed with bands of brown satin.

Mrs. George Young, wife of the Second Secretary of the British embassy, wore a particularly beautiful gown of hand painted white chiffon, painted in an orchid design, with an overdrape of white chiffon, and a black velvet hat trimmed with white marabou.

Mrs. Chandler Hale, wife of the Third Assistant Secretary of State, wore one of the most attractive gowns at the reception. It was of pale blue satin veiled in a tunic of silver embroidered net with touches of silver embroidery on the sleeves and Dutch neck. Mrs. Hale wore a handsome diamond pendant and becoming drop diamond earrings.

Miss Robert Shaw Oliver, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War, wore a gown of blue satin veiled in chiffon, and Miss Marion Oliver wore hand-painted chiffon painted in a design of orchids.
